

Wind Energy Summit: 2012

IPP, Repowering & Offshore

17th-18th January 2012
Mumbai, India

Why the conference?

During the first decade of the 21st century, India emerged as the 2nd largest wind power market in Asia. Currently, its cumulative installed capacity is close to 13 GW, with the market growing at an average rate of over 20% over the past 3 years. More than 2,100 MW wind capacity projects were added in the current financial year 2010–11.

Over a period of time, wind energy investment models are now evolving in India with a greater focus on IPPs, repowering and beginning of an offshore market. With wind energy being a key growth market for meeting state RPOs, the sector will see huge investments over the next few years as it continues to be one of India's largest growth sectors of the economy.

Wind power in India has shown sharp growth, with the Government initiating a series of reforms over the last two years to increase the amount, and the efficiency, of private investment in the sector, including: introduction of generation-based incentives, Renewable purchase obligations and rationalised wind tariffs.

Meanwhile, developers continue to aggressively expand their capacity in the country. A number of private wind power producers are now expanding their portfolio in India and overseas. With this increased focus on developing large scale wind farms in India and Asian subcontinent, we bring to you India's largest international conference and exhibition for wind power project developers in India. The conference will bring together policy makers, project investors, financial institutions, EPC players, equipment manufacturers and project advisors from across the globe to discuss the most suitable strategies for the investors.

Indian Wind Energy Outlook:

India is endowed with a large, viable and economically exploitable wind power potential. Over the last 10 years wind capacity has grown at a CAGR of 22%. Cumulative installed capacity is expected to reach 12 GW by 2010. India's potential is conservatively estimated at 45,561 MW for setting up wind farms @ 12 ha/MW in sites having wind power density greater than 200 W/ sq. mt. at 50 m hub-height. Indian government envisages a capacity addition of 10,500 MW during the 11th Five – Year Plan period (2007-2012). India is placed at the third position in the world in terms of new additions in 2008 and this corresponds to an overall increase of over 40% in new wind power stations.

What is the conference about?

With the growing demand for energy and an increased emphasis on clean energy, India is one of the largest markets in the world for renewable energy investments.

With key policy developments in recent years, the Indian government has created a platform to attract investments by serious players from all over the globe to boost the growth in this sector. Today, as the wind sector matures in India, it is offering new challenging opportunities for the investors and developers alike. This annual conference looks to address key issues for industry growth in coming decade.
